Meals Make the Difference.

John was living out in the country with no transportation. He was about 18 miles from the nearest grocery store. When Regional Services Director Chris McCune went to visit John he was almost skin and bones and he had a host of chronic health conditions. He also needed oxygen 24 hours a day.

A lack of transportation was the only obstacle keeping John from being completely independent and nourished. Medicaid approved two meals per day, which the Area Agency on Aging immediately began delivering.

Chris did a follow-up visit three months later. John appeared to have gained about 20 pounds, no longer required oxygen, and was out mowing his own yard. “This is quite a transformation accomplished just with food,” Chris said.
